taking issue with those who see recent social transformations as an extension of modernity the author contends that social theory must confront an epochal change from the modern era to a new era of globality in which human beings can conceive of forces at work on a global scale and in which they espouse values that take the globe as their reference point the book begins by assessing the problems of writing about modernity showing how narratives of an endlessly self perpetuating modern age were intrinsic to the modern project the attempt by enlightenment philosophers to transform the everyday world in accord with science and logic under the auspices of the nation state now we are beginning to realize that the nation state and the modern project cannot renew themselves endlessly through expansion instead the author contends the age has culminated in its own dissolution and globality has supplanted modernity as the basis for action and social organization in theorizing the global age he considers the worldwide environmental consequences of aggregate human activities the reconception of human security in the age of nuclear weapons technological advances in communication systems the rise of a global economy and the growing reflexivity of global consciousness as people and groups begin to refer to the globe as the frame for their beliefs the book concludes by examining the consequences of the global age thesis for politics identifying a new popular construction of the state that the author terms performative citizenship in the modern age the nation state was the central power and citizens were beneficiaries of that power with rights and duties in the global age citizens respond to the lack of central power by creating or performing the state themselves the global managerial class uses the skills learned in the bureaucracy of the nation state to bring pressure on national governments in the interests of global economic environmental or human rights issues in 14 previously unpublished essays british sociologist martin albrow develops the global age thesis that he first proposed in the 90s to capture the novelty of our own epoch he absorbs insights from max weber emile durkheim arnold toynbee and norbert elias into a global discourse that shapes new approaches to abiding human dilemmas of faith justice and responsibility even in resisting the idea that globalization and americanization are inevitable he argues that framing our time as global promotes a collective response to the challenges facing humankind the hope for a human future depends on a normative ordering of global society on global governance that allows local national and global cultures to co exist and thrive
